Movie makers want help

The story of Harry de Leyer and Snowman is one that will be forever remembered in the hearts and minds of those who knew the "eighty-dollar champion."

De Leyer & Snowman were the Cinderella story of late 1950's and 1960's. Snowman was an old Amish plow horse that Harry rescued off a truck that was bound for the meat and glue factory for $80. In less than two years after his rescue, they were the national show jumping champions and had become national celebrities.

Now, thanks to Docutainment Films, director Ron Davis and producer Karin Offield, de Leyer and Snowman's remarkable saga will be forever commemorated in the documentary, Harry & Snowman.

To create the archival aspect of the film, Docutainment Films is seeking help from the equestrian world to help locate old film footage, stills and newspaper or magazine articles from the 1950's, 1960's and 1970's, which will be included in the film.

Visit harryandsnowman.com for a complete list of what information the filmmakers are seeking and how you can help, as well as a trailer for the film.
